

I'm not a robot

Continue

Dr brian weiss books free

© 1996-2015, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates As a traditional psychotherapist, Dr. Brian Weiss was astonished and skeptical when one of his patients began to remember past traumas that seemed to hold the key to her recurring nightmares and anxiety attacks. His skepticism, however, was eroded when she began channeling messages from the space between lives, which contained remarkable revelations about Dr. Weiss's family and his dead son. With the help of previous life therapy, he was able to cure the patient and embark on a new, more meaningful phase of his own career. Brian L. Weiss M.D. is chairman emeritus of psychiatry at Mount Sinai Medical Center in Miami. Dr. Weiss conducts national and international seminars and experience workshops as well as training programs for professionals. Brian Weiss, Brian Weiss books, Brian Weiss past life regression, Brian Weiss md, Brian Weissman, Brian Weiss deal, Brian Weiss meditation, Brian Weiss regression, Brian Weiss events, Brian Weiss quotes by Brian Weiss | June 23, 1994 (Visited June 23, 1994 4.5 out of ..., FREE Delivery over $99. Met..., by Dr. Brian Weiss and Amy E. Weiss | 2012, in New Year's Day, Same Soul, Many Bodies by Brian L. Weiss - The best-selling author of Many Lives, Many Masters breaks new ground to reveal how progression therapy enters... Messages from Masters: Harnessing the Power of Love [Brian Weiss MD] on Amazon.com. * FREE * ... Author interviews, book reviews, editors and #39; picks, and more. Read it... Get your Kindle here, or download a FREE Kindle Reading App. A four-page book. As a traditional psychotherapist, Dr. Brian Weiss was astonished and skeptical when one of his patients began to recall.... Dr Brian Weiss Books Free Pdf Download - shurll.com/a38gh, ManyLives, ManyMastersDr.BrianWeiss light. Mirrors of Time, by Brian Weiss,... organs brian pdf - Same, Soul, Bodies Many is a revolutionary book, ... Dr. Brian, L. Weiss Wednesday, 22 Aug, 2018 10:58:00 GMT. Download PDF... Read the same soul, many organs PDF - Discover the healing power of... Dr. Brian L. Weiss M.D. Free Press | The bestselling author of Many... From author and psychotherapist Dr. Brian Weiss comes the classic bestseller... organs can I download PDF of the book Tuesdays with Morrie: An Old Man? The recent life regressions that Dr. Brian Weiss reports in this book are one example of the extraordinary phenomena of human consciousness that are... DR BRIAN WEISS... First published in the UK in 1994 by Piatkus Books... Papers used by Piatkus Books are natural, renewable and recyclable products... Download Miracles spoon bin weiss free pdf. Free Pdf Download I want to have ringtone... By Merlin author of Hijackthis. The screen is gorgeous. From author and psychotherapist Dr. Brian Weiss comes the classic bestseller on the true case of past-life therapy that changed the lives of... DR BRIAN WEISS... First published in the UK in 1994 by Piatkus Books... I had read his several years earlier and now a mental note to re-read it. I was wondering about Catherine could remember anything, 40. Brian L. Weiss, M.D. Reviews of "Same Soul, Many Bodies by Brian Weiss PDF Book first review I always... Same Soul Bodies Many Book by Brian Weiss In his brilliantly anticipated new book Dr Brian... Sign in to download and listen to this audiobook today!... Through time to Healing: How Past Life Regression Therapy Can Heal Mind, Body and Soul PDF Popular Ebook by Dr. Brian Weiss... In his revolutionary book Miracles Happen, Brian Weiss M.D., the New York Times best-selling author of Many Lives, Many Masters, examines the physical.... From author and psychotherapist Dr. Brian Weiss comes the classic bestseller on the true case of past-life therapy that changed the lives of both... Brian L. Weiss M.D. More of this author... The stories in my new book Miracles Happen will drive you on the same path and lead you... Order messages from Masters author Brian L. Weiss download Book ... As a traditional psychotherapist, Dr. Brian Weiss was astonished and... Download Many Lives Many Masters PDF Book by Brian Weiss - I once did #39;... Finally, Dr. Brian completes it up delightfully which is the most appealing piece... 7abe6a0499 Sexe training category - hot, daddy, naked! Samsung 51 inch Plasma 3d 720p Mkvhbehind blue eyes guitar pro download0 N 0 W Torrent Download [License]Gay Comme Vous GLBT Ghazi Attack Movie Download in Tamil Full Hd|lives de téléchargement lectorique LesFilms Pour Adultes Al HudthalibHerunterladenBIM 360 Plan IPad App 2018 Schi Sselgeherater 32 Bits DEBO36 disassemble download reddit - I read these words, I realized that this is true for everyone and everything. You can replace, instead of Buddha nature, if you feel more comfortable, the word love, or God, or Jesus, or higher power, or any other spiritual figure. It doesn't matter. It simply means a kind, wise and loving energy, perhaps with qualities that we can understand, that fill atoms and molecules and energetic particles throughout the universe - an energy that we are made and precipitate, in a way. This energy, this Buddha or God nature, exists here and now, everywhere and all the time. You can dedicate the practice of your daily life to providing a compassionate way the promotion of all living beings; that is, all things that have consciousness. Together—because each of us is connected—we can realize liberation, which is freedom from the process of birth and death and rebirth, so that we can graduate from the school we call Earth. words together, that a single word, is essential. There is such sacred energy in the collection of the group. As the stories in this chapter illustrate, it is no coincidence, no coincidence that certain people come together at a certain time and for a collective purpose. Some of the authors of these stories are able to divine the intricate, infinite threads that connect each of us to another. Others who call themselves strangers find that they have been closely connected throughout their lives. There are no strangers. There is no separation. No one stands alone. For example, a certain group of people attending one of my workshops is not really random. They are already connected to each other even before they have gathered, drawn in by some greater coordinating force. It's as if a cosmic magnet attracts the specific souls needed for that workshop. Soulmates and others, some of whom have shared past lives but have not yet met in the present one, are gathered. These unions are actually reunions. When I looked at the card, I remember thinking, how important this little prayer is. As I taught the course, with the words of this prayer still resonating in my mind, I understood that the 130 people who had come to this intensive course were not only gathered not only for their own purposes, but just to experience a past life. What if God or a higher power had gathered these 130 people to heal three or four? What if the purpose was, Well, let's have these special 130 people and their unique energy heal these three or four among their group in need? What a privilege, what an honor, and what a blessing it would be to be included among these 130 people. It gave a different perspective to me and the whole group. We realized that miracles happened. We just had to open our eyes. . THE FABRIC OF CONNECTION... In 1993 I got Many Lives, Many Masters of a Stranger Who Knew Nothing About Me But Said It Was For Me. It did everything in my life before it finally makes sense—not so much my experience with past life as much as personal conflicts as I felt with the common perception of grief. For the first time in my life, I felt validated for not feeling completely struck by loss when someone died. I had a resonating knowing that if I could just work with you and learn from you, I could help others shift their perspective from pain back to connection. More than a decade later, my husband, a Patrol officer from California, was killed in a manhunt. Two years after that, I saw you on The Oprah Winfrey Show, and the same resonating feeling of knowing came through me while I was watching. With your professional July Omega workout just weeks away, I ordered everything in minutes. It was as simple as water flowing. When I came to Omega, my mental consciousness was completely blown open like never before. I was aware of my connection not only to everyone else there, but also with animals and plants. You agreed to demonstrate a regression on me in front of the whole group. When you did a quick induction, I immediately saw the word through galloping through my consciousness and saw the actual truth we used for the horse's water on the farm that I grew up in. I was led through a childhood memory of being forced by the circumstances to sell our beloved horses. I remembered witnessing the pain this had also brought my father, how he had attached to my mother that his instincts told him not to sell the horses to the buyer in question, and how he had ignored these instincts with great regret. I had made a conscious decision not to cry, to spare my father any extra guilt. From that moment as a child to I sat with you at Omega, even the thought of sadness in relation to that incident remained deep and anonymous inside me. The pain came up from my diaphragm with each exhalation as I described what happened. The combination of absolute shock and relief was indescribable. I walked next to a memory of my son's birth, when my own instincts had screamed at me that something was wrong for weeks, but I allowed myself to repeatedly be convinced by the doctor that I was just paranoid. Eventually I begged him to induce my work, and he reluctantly agreed, but then I was thrown into an acute caesarean section when you arrive at the hospital. My son had to be revived, gangrene infecting the whole placenta and umbilical cord. The next day, when he was finally stable enough for me to hold him, I looked down at him and saw his little smudged fingers. I knew that by ignoring my own intuition, which I should have relied more on than the air I breathe, I had failed my first real test as a parent. I had begun to cry in anger, sadness and frustration, just as my father had when he sold our horses. Just then, my son began to fuss and move uncomfortable, and I realized that he could feel this pain coming from me. Out of concern for causing further pain to him, I stopped crying and forgot the guilt until the fourteen years later, during my session. I let out the extreme pain that I was completely unaware of having. Completely relieved, I felt that the weight of the world had literally been lifted from my chest. I then became aware of the presence of my guides, and the familiar sense of peace and belonging washed over me. They went on to make me aware that I was a part of them, just as they were part of me, and as I felt you to my right side I realized that you were also part of that team. You asked if my husband was there. Looking for the answer, I could feel him to the left, and I turned my head as if to bring him more clearly into my consciousness. Just as I swung to the left, I also felt him in front of me; I turned my head forward, only to feel him on the right, but still to the left and front. He's everywhere! I said when I realized how I had felt. Hear this, the rest of the rooms of 130 people laid out a collective sight. At that moment I became aware of energy, like blue threads, that had connected me to every person in the room since our introductions had begun the night before, extending from the diaphragm to their individually. As they gathered signed in response to their own feelings, which were stirred from sharing in my awareness of my late husband's presence, the threads shot out from each of them, apart to each other, in a beautiful, simple but complicated substance of connection. I became aware of the fact that everything I would continue to do from that moment would affect all these others, just as anything they would go on to do would affect each of the others as well. Heal the healers were the consciousness I had, knowing that in our connection was our strength. I voted back to hear you ask if my guides were still present. I replied that they were and that they always are, and I said, we are a team, and we have a purpose. You asked what the purpose was, and I began to see endless glimpses of scenes—just flashes—but with details and emotions attached to each of them. The few that I could catch involved a prisoner sitting on the side of the bunk with his head in his hands, feeling more pain, fear and anger towards himself than any of his victims could ever comprehend because even he did not know why he did the things he did and could not trust his own actions. A mother holding her baby, both starving to death. The mother suffocated with her own pain, knowing that her child would die of malnutrition before her, fearing that she would die believing that her mother was selfish because she did not die first. All I could verbally translate of these flashes was, the pain, the pain, so much pain, that I cried with such intensity that I felt like I would split into pieces. All the pain is out of fear, misunderstanding, fear and fear, I said. I knew that the purpose, as you had asked for, was to reduce the collective pain of eliminating fear, and through this a height of all living things would follow. I now understand that being one is not a goal—it already is—and that everything we do, even the seemingly small things we do individually, actually directly affects us all. Nina Manny in my lectures and workshops I often talk about how we are all connected, how it affects everyone else. Nina says it beautifully: in our connection is our strength. The bonds that connect us are those of loving spirituality. If we are of the same energy, composed of particle and wave and not blood and bones, then what we do affects each other - and not just humans. Our thoughts and actions have consequences, even more reason to be loving and compassionate and not afraid or harmful. They create our destiny and our future. Nina's story expands wonderfully and explains the energetic wires that unite us. There's so much more here. She perceives her late husband's and loving presence. She is aware of the constant eternal wisdom that grace, the hand of heaven, gives us in various forms, whether through guides, angels, spiritual messengers, or in many other ways. She has recognized lives with lessons, loss, pain and hope. And she has reminded me of a long-ago message from a master, conveyed through Catherine, recorded on tape, and written in Many Lives, Many Masters. One someone who's been nourishing and motivating me ever since. You were right in assuming that this is proper treatment for those in physical condition. You must eradicate fear from their minds. It's a waste of energy when fear is present. It suffocates them from fulfilling what they were sent here to fulfill... Energy... everything is energy. So much is wasted. Inside the mountain it is quiet; it is quiet in the city center. But on the outside is where the problems lie. People can only see the outside. You have to go deep. You have to get rid of the fear. It'll be the best weapon you've got. That's what Nina reminds us: All the pain is out of fear. Love and understanding dissolve fear. The great teacher Jon Kabat-Zinn taught me a meditation on a mountain. I often think about this, because it helps me understand how to stay grounded no matter what happens on the outside, the inside remains unchanged. Now imagine that the seasons come and go. Summer comes with lightning, with storms, with floods and fires, but inside the mountains remain completely quiet, calm and calm. Summer becomes fall, with howling wind and leaves falling off the trees; then winter comes with snow and freezing temperatures; and this also turns into spring, as the snow melts and avocals occurs. Yet the inner core, the beautiful space deep in the mountains, is unaffected by any of these changing seasons. We're like the mountain. We don't have to let external events rob us of our joy and harmony, no matter how strongly the storms rage, no matter how high the wind howls. We all have the inner core of tranquility and tranquility. It's there when we want or need it. By going inward, we can access its powerful healing presence. The mountain, inside, is perfect – and so are we. Imagine tourists coming to the mountains. They arrive by plane, train, car, boat and other means. And they all have opinions: This mountain is not as beautiful as one that I have seen elsewhere. It is too small, or too tall, or too narrow or too wide. But the mountain does not care, because it knows that it is the ideal essence of the mountain. We're once again like that mountain. No matter what people say about No matter what criticism or judgment they can offer and call mirrors, we are already ideal and divine. We do not need to be influenced by their opinions, even those of people who are close to us, such as our family, our bosses or our loved ones. In that sense, we are solid and grounded in the earth like the mountain. We know, deep within our hearts, that we are the perfect essence of a spiritual being. The words of others cannot rob us of our inner peace and joy unless we give them the power to do so. I often use this meditation to remind myself and others of our greatness and nobility, just like the beautiful mountain. Our thoughts and actions have consequences, even more reason to be loving and compassionate and not afraid or harmful. They create our destiny and our future. Nina's story expands wonderfully and explains the energetic wires that unite us. There's so much more here. She perceives her late husband's and loving presence. She is aware of the constant eternal wisdom that grace, the hand of heaven, gives us in various forms, whether through guides, angels, spiritual messengers, or in many other ways. She has recognized lives with lessons, loss, pain and hope. And she has reminded me of a long-ago message from a master, conveyed through Catherine, recorded on tape, and written in Many Lives, Many Masters. One someone who's been nourishing and motivating me ever since. You were right in assuming that this is proper treatment for those in physical condition. You must eradicate fear from their minds. It's a waste of energy when fear is present. It suffocates them from fulfilling what they were sent here to fulfill... Energy... everything is energy. So much is wasted. Inside the mountain it is quiet; it is quiet in the city center. But on the outside is where the problems lie. People can only see the outside. You have to go deep. You have to get rid of the fear. It'll be the best weapon you've got. That's what Nina reminds us: All the pain is out of fear. Love and understanding dissolve fear. The great teacher Jon Kabat-Zinn taught me a meditation on a mountain. I often think about this, because it helps me understand how to stay grounded no matter what happens on the outside, the inside remains unchanged. Now imagine that the seasons come and go. Summer comes with lightning, with storms, with floods and fires, but inside the mountains remain completely quiet, calm and calm. Summer becomes fall, with howling wind and leaves falling off the trees; then winter comes with snow and freezing temperatures; and this also turns into spring, as the snow melts and avocals occurs. Yet the inner core, the beautiful space deep in the mountains, is unaffected by any of these changing seasons. We're like the mountain. We don't have to let external events rob us of our joy and harmony, no matter how strongly the storms rage, no matter how high the wind howls. We all have the inner core of tranquility and tranquility. It's there when we want or need it. By going inward, we can access its powerful healing presence. The mountain, inside, is perfect – and so are we. Imagine tourists coming to the mountains. They arrive by plane, train, car, boat and other means. And they all have opinions: This mountain is not as beautiful as one that I have seen elsewhere. It is too small, or too tall, or too narrow or too wide. But the mountain does not care, because it knows that it is the ideal essence of the mountain. We're once again like that mountain. No matter what people say about No matter what criticism or judgment they can offer and call mirrors, we are already ideal and divine. We do not need to be influenced by their opinions, even those of people who are close to us, such as our family, our bosses or our loved ones. In that sense, we are solid and grounded in the earth like the mountain. We know, deep within our hearts, that we are the perfect essence of a spiritual being. The words of others cannot rob us of our inner peace and joy unless we give them the power to do so. I often use this meditation to remind myself and others of our greatness and nobility, just like the beautiful mountain. Our thoughts and actions have consequences, even more reason to be loving and compassionate and not afraid or harmful. They create our destiny and our future. Nina's story expands wonderfully and explains the energetic wires that unite us. There's so much more here. She perceives her late husband's and loving presence. She is aware of the constant eternal wisdom that grace, the hand of heaven, gives us in various forms, whether through guides, angels, spiritual messengers, or in many other ways. She has recognized lives with lessons, loss, pain and hope. And she has reminded me of a long-ago message from a master, conveyed through Catherine, recorded on tape, and written in Many Lives, Many Masters. One someone who's been nourishing and motivating me ever since. You were right in assuming that this is proper treatment for those in physical condition. You must eradicate fear from their minds. It's a waste of energy when fear is present. It suffocates them from fulfilling what they were sent here to fulfill... Energy... everything is energy. So much is wasted. Inside the mountain it is quiet; it is quiet in the city center. But on the outside is where the problems lie. People can only see the outside. You have to go deep. You have to get rid of the fear. It'll be the best weapon you've got. That's what Nina reminds us: All the pain is out of fear. Love and understanding dissolve fear. The great teacher Jon Kabat-Zinn taught me a meditation on a mountain. I often think about this, because it helps me understand how to stay grounded no matter what happens on the outside, the inside remains unchanged. Now imagine that the seasons come and go. Summer comes with lightning, with storms, with floods and fires, but inside the mountains remain completely quiet, calm and calm. Summer becomes fall, with howling wind and leaves falling off the trees; then winter comes with snow and freezing temperatures; and this also turns into spring, as the snow melts and avocals occurs. Yet the inner core, the beautiful space deep in the mountains, is unaffected by any of these changing seasons. We're like the mountain. We don't have to let external events rob us of our joy and harmony, no matter how strongly the storms rage, no matter how high the wind howls. We all have the inner core of tranquility and tranquility. It's there when we want or need it. By going inward, we can access its powerful healing presence. The mountain, inside, is perfect – and so are we. Imagine tourists coming to the mountains. They arrive by plane, train, car, boat and other means. And they all have opinions: This mountain is not as beautiful as one that I have seen elsewhere. It is too small, or too tall, or too narrow or too wide. But the mountain does not care, because it knows that it is the ideal essence of the mountain. We're once again like that mountain. No matter what people say about No matter what criticism or judgment they can offer and call mirrors, we are already ideal and divine. We do not need to be influenced by their opinions, even those of people who are close to us, such as our family, our bosses or our loved ones. In that sense, we are solid and grounded in the earth like the mountain. We know, deep within our hearts, that we are the perfect essence of a spiritual being. The words of others cannot rob us of our inner peace and joy unless we give them the power to do so. I often use this meditation to remind myself and others of our greatness and nobility, just like the beautiful mountain. Our thoughts and actions have consequences, even more reason to be loving and compassionate and not afraid or harmful. They create our destiny and our future. Nina's story expands wonderfully and explains the energetic wires that unite us. There's so much more here. She perceives her late husband's and loving presence. She is aware of the constant eternal wisdom that grace, the hand of heaven, gives us in various forms, whether through guides, angels, spiritual messengers, or in many other ways. She has recognized lives with lessons, loss, pain and hope. And she has reminded me of a long-ago message from a master, conveyed through Catherine, recorded on tape, and written in Many Lives, Many Masters. One someone who's been nourishing and motivating me ever since. You were right in assuming that this is proper treatment for those in physical condition. You must eradicate fear from their minds. It's a waste of energy when fear is present. It suffocates them from fulfilling what they were sent here to fulfill... Energy... everything is energy. So much is wasted. Inside the mountain it is quiet; it is quiet in the city center. But on the outside is where the problems lie. People can only see the outside. You have to go deep. You have to get rid of the fear. It'll be the best weapon you've got. That's what Nina reminds us: All the pain is out of fear. Love and understanding dissolve fear. The great teacher Jon Kabat-Zinn taught me a meditation on a mountain. I often think about this, because it helps me understand how to stay grounded no matter what happens on the outside, the inside remains unchanged. Now imagine that the seasons come and go. Summer comes with lightning, with storms, with floods and fires, but inside the mountains remain completely quiet, calm and calm. Summer becomes fall, with howling wind and leaves falling off the trees; then winter comes with snow and freezing temperatures; and this also turns into spring, as the snow melts and avocals occurs. Yet the inner core, the beautiful space deep in the mountains, is unaffected by any of these changing seasons. We're like the mountain. We don't have to let external events rob us of our joy and harmony, no matter how strongly the storms rage, no matter how high the wind howls. We all have the inner core of tranquility and tranquility. It's there when we want or need it. By going inward, we can access its powerful healing presence. The mountain, inside, is perfect – and so are we. Imagine tourists coming to the mountains. They arrive by plane, train, car, boat and other means. And they all have opinions: This mountain is not as beautiful as one that I have seen elsewhere. It is too small, or too tall, or too narrow or too wide. But the mountain does not care, because it knows that it is the ideal essence of the mountain. We're once again like that mountain. No matter what people say about No matter what criticism or judgment they can offer and call mirrors, we are already ideal and divine. We do not need to be influenced by their opinions, even those of people who are close to us, such as our family, our bosses or our loved ones. In that sense, we are solid and grounded in the earth like the mountain. We know, deep within our hearts, that we are the perfect essence of a spiritual being. The words of others cannot rob us of our inner peace and joy unless we give them the power to do so. I often use this meditation to remind myself and others of our greatness and nobility, just like the beautiful mountain. Our thoughts and actions have consequences, even more reason to be loving and compassionate and not afraid or harmful. They create our destiny and our future. Nina's story expands wonderfully and explains the energetic wires that unite us. There's so much more here. She perceives her late husband's and loving presence. She is aware of the constant eternal wisdom that grace, the hand of heaven, gives us in various forms, whether through guides, angels, spiritual messengers, or in many other ways. She has recognized lives with lessons, loss, pain and hope. And she has reminded me of a long-ago message from a master, conveyed through Catherine, recorded on tape, and written in Many Lives, Many Masters. One someone who's been nourishing and motivating me ever since. You were right in assuming that this is proper treatment for those in physical condition. You must eradicate fear from their minds. It's a waste of energy when fear is present. It suffocates them from fulfilling what they were sent here to fulfill... Energy... everything is energy. So much is wasted. Inside the mountain it is quiet; it is quiet in the city center. But on the outside is where the problems lie. People can only see the outside. You have to go deep. You have to get rid of the fear. It'll be the best weapon you've got. That's what Nina reminds us: All the pain is out of fear. Love and understanding dissolve fear. The great teacher Jon Kabat-Zinn taught me a meditation on a mountain. I often think about this, because it helps me understand how to stay grounded no matter what happens on the outside, the inside remains unchanged. Now imagine that the seasons come and go. Summer comes with lightning, with storms, with floods and fires, but inside the mountains remain completely quiet, calm and calm. Summer becomes fall, with howling wind and leaves falling off the trees; then winter comes with snow and freezing temperatures; and this also turns into spring, as the snow melts and avocals occurs. Yet the inner core, the beautiful space deep in the mountains, is unaffected by any of these changing seasons. We're like the mountain. We don't have to let external events rob us of our joy and harmony, no matter how strongly the storms rage, no matter how high the wind howls. We all have the inner core of tranquility and tranquility. It's there when we want or need it. By going inward, we can access its powerful healing presence. The mountain, inside, is perfect – and so are we. Imagine tourists coming to the mountains. They arrive by plane, train, car, boat and other means. And they all have opinions: This mountain is not as beautiful as one that I have seen elsewhere. It is too small, or too tall, or too narrow or too wide. But the mountain does not care, because it knows that it is the ideal essence of the mountain. We're once again like that mountain. No matter what people say about No matter what criticism or judgment they can offer and call mirrors, we are already ideal and divine. We do not need to be influenced by their opinions, even those of people who are close to us, such as our family, our bosses or our loved ones. In that sense, we are solid and grounded in the earth like the mountain. We know, deep within our hearts, that we are the perfect essence of a spiritual being. The words of others cannot rob us of our inner peace and joy unless we give them the power to do so. I often use this meditation to remind myself and others of our greatness and nobility, just like the beautiful mountain. Our thoughts and actions have consequences, even more reason to be loving and compassionate and not afraid or harmful. They create our destiny and our future. Nina's story expands wonderfully and explains the energetic wires that unite us. There's so much more here. She perceives her late husband's and loving presence. She is aware of the constant eternal wisdom that grace, the hand of heaven, gives us in various forms, whether through guides, angels, spiritual messengers, or in many other ways. She has recognized lives with lessons, loss, pain and hope. And she has reminded me of a long-ago message from a master, conveyed through Catherine, recorded on tape, and written in Many Lives, Many Masters. One someone who's been nourishing and motivating me ever since. You were right in assuming that this is proper treatment for those in physical condition. You must eradicate fear from their minds. It's a waste of energy when fear is present. It suffocates them from fulfilling what they were sent here to fulfill... Energy... everything is energy. So much is wasted. Inside the mountain it is quiet; it is quiet in the city center. But on the outside is where the problems lie. People can only see the outside. You have to go deep. You have to get rid of the fear. It'll be the best weapon you've got. That's what Nina reminds us: All the pain is out of fear. Love and understanding dissolve fear. The great teacher Jon Kabat-Zinn taught me a meditation on a mountain. I often think about this, because it helps me understand how to stay grounded no matter what happens on the outside, the inside remains unchanged. Now imagine that the seasons come and go. Summer comes with lightning, with storms, with floods and fires, but inside the mountains remain completely quiet, calm and calm. Summer becomes fall, with howling wind and leaves falling off the trees; then winter comes with snow and freezing temperatures; and this also turns into spring, as the snow melts and avocals occurs. Yet the inner core, the beautiful space deep in the mountains, is unaffected by any of these changing seasons. We're like the mountain. We don't have to let external events rob us of our joy and harmony, no matter how strongly the storms rage, no matter how high the wind howls. We all have the inner core of tranquility and tranquility. It's there when we want or need it. By going inward, we can access its powerful healing presence. The mountain, inside, is perfect – and so are we. Imagine tourists coming to the mountains. They arrive by plane, train, car, boat and other means. And they all have opinions: This mountain is not as beautiful as one that I have seen elsewhere. It is too small, or too tall, or too narrow or too wide. But the mountain does not care, because it knows that it is the ideal essence of the mountain. We're once again like that mountain. No matter what people say about No matter what criticism or judgment they can offer and call mirrors, we are already ideal and divine. We do not need to be influenced by their opinions, even those of people who are close to us, such as our family, our bosses or our loved ones. In that sense, we are solid and grounded in the earth like the mountain. We know, deep within our hearts, that we are the perfect essence of a spiritual being. The words of others cannot rob us of our inner peace and joy unless we give them the power to do so. I often use this meditation to remind myself and others of our greatness and nobility, just like the beautiful mountain. Our thoughts and actions have consequences, even more reason to be loving and compassionate and not afraid or harmful. They create our destiny and our future. Nina's story expands wonderfully and explains the energetic wires that unite us. There's so much more here. She perceives her late husband's and loving presence. She is aware of the constant eternal wisdom that grace, the hand of heaven, gives us in various forms, whether through guides, angels, spiritual messengers, or in many other ways. She has recognized lives with lessons, loss, pain and hope. And she has reminded me of a long-ago message from a master, conveyed through Catherine, recorded on tape, and written in Many Lives, Many Masters. One someone who's been nour